

President's Advisers Worried by Truculent Defiance of the House

WASHINGTON — Presidential advisers admit, off the record, that the House of Representatives has them worried.

Its recent transition from complete docility to a truculent defiance is one of the most significant developments of the political year.

When the legislative wheels first began grinding, it was the Senate which was the "Peck's bad boy" of Capitol Hill. It would be far from accurate to say that the Senate has now been roped and hog-tied. But it is a fact that since its early belligerency on the Works-Relief Bill, the Senate has worked in fairly close harmony with the White House.

All of the major "must" measures — holding company, Wagner labor disputes, social security, NRA and TVA — emerged from the Senate in forms satisfactory to the President.

But the House, which started as a lamb, is now a raging lion. After riddling Holding Company Bill, threatening to perform the same operation on the TVA amendments.

Reasons

This development probably is due to two factors:

First, more than a fourth of the members are new-comers who won their seats chiefly as a result of the overwhelming New Deal landslide. A large proportion of these first-termers are "political accidents" who will disappear in next year's balloting. And they know it.

Obviously they can afford to be indifferent to campaign pledges and party loyalty. In other words, figuring that they have only a limited tenure of office, the boys are out to make the most of it — for themselves.

Second, Democratic floor leadership is the weakest and secretly most hostile to the Administration in recent congressional history.

Third-Raters

It is an extraordinary fact, but not one of the top-rung Democratic herd-riders is a strong figure. Speaker Byrns, Acting Floor Leader John Taylor, Chairman John O'Connor of the Rules Committee, and Whip Pat Boland, all are third-raters.

They owe their party eminence to two things only — seniority, plus the President's failure last December to back able candidates for their posts.

Had he thrown his support to the latter — as he was urged to do — it is likely that a far different situation would exist in the House today. With hard-hitting leaders wholeheartedly supporting instead of covertly sabotaging him behind the scenes, Roosevelt probably could have won his major fights, including the "death sentence" clause in the Holding Company Bill.

Bob La Follette

When "Old Bob" La Follette died in 1925, he had no notion of the career in store for his second son, "Young Bob."

A veteran Washington photographer recalls that when La Follette posed for what was to be his last photograph, he said:

"I don't know what's to become of Bob. Phil is District Attorney already, but Bob — well, I'm afraid I've held him back too much. I'll have to let him step for himself."

Three months later he did step out. He became United States Senator in his father's place.

Country Club Scene of Annual Meeting; Discuss Market, Legislation.

The annual summer meeting of the central Ohio grain dealers held yesterday at Pickaway Country club under the auspices of the Circleville group of the Ohio Grain, Mill & Feed Dealers' association, was attended by approximately 160 members of the organization from this section of the state.

The gathering was informal and without a definite program of entertainment, but there were a number of interesting discussions relative to grain marketing, crop conditions, etc., that are of vital importance to members of the organization.

Discuss New Crop

Representatives from the mills and terminal markets of Cincinnati, Toledo, Cleveland, O., and Huntington, W. Va., led discussions on marketing the new wheat crop, and representatives of the state organization discussed legislation affecting the grain trade in general.

Quite a number of the visitors arrived in the early afternoon and took part in the golf tournament and other games, which are the usual features of the annual gathering.

A chicken dinner was served at 7:30, followed by the business session and the interesting discussions.

Compiling reports of crop conditions in general throughout this section, the grain dealers expressed the opinion that in most localities there will be a normal crop of wheat. Combined wheat is showing considerable moisture content owing to the exceptional amount of rain during the harvest season, but shocked grain, it is believed, will prove to be of a better quality with average weathering conditions prevailing until the crop is threshed. The general quality of the wheat is yet to be determined, and grain dealers would make no predictions.

Operation of New Combine by Thomas Boys Drawing Attention of Throng

Another marvel of the machine age—a combine, a mechanical device which cuts and threshes wheat in one process, was the object of much interest at the Thomas farm in Wayne-twp Monday afternoon.

Farmers, town folk and travelers, stopped along Route 22 to see the machine work. They looked on in awe as it cut through the field, harvesting, threshing and dumping the wheat into a truck in one operation.

Only three persons are needed to operate the machine, one to drive the tractor which pulls the combine, another to guide and watch over the combine, and a third to drive the truck to take the threshed grain.

Labor-saving, money-saving—it certainly is! It is said that the average farmer spends about $300 at threshing time. This machine eliminates the use of about 10 men at harvesting time and about 20 or 25 at threshing time.

And, too, the women folk who always have had to worry about preparing a threshing dinner, (and what dinners they usually are!), no longer have to worry because now they have to feed but three men.

Kernit and Howard Thomas, sons of the late Joe

Thomas, one of Wayne-twp's best known farmers, purchased the combine this year. The price of a good combine, according to hardware merchants, is $1,750.

The Thomas brothers started harvesting one of their wheat fields yesterday but discovered that the recent heavy rains had so toughened the grain that it was impractical to continue. They intend to wait a day or two before they start again.

Two trips around the 35-acre field in which they were harvesting netted the Thomases 40 bushels, filling a bin atop the combine. Samples of this grain tested fairly good, according to elevator workmen at the Ralston-Purina west side plant.

It is worth the time of one living in this machine age to see the combine work. It will probably be in operation, weather permitting, during the next week.

The price of wheat started on the road to recovery today as the Eshelman Mill, from which The Herald obtains its grain market reports, offered three cents more per bushel than it did at the close of the market Monday.

The price offered to farmers at the mill Monday and until the close Tuesday was 69 cents while today's quotation was 72 cents. This recovery after a drop of seven cents in two days last week is good news to Pickaway-co's farmers who watch the wheat market like a hawk watches a chicken at this time of the year.

The price offered for white and yellow corn by the Eshelman firm also showed an increase, both bringing an offer two cents better than Monday.

CHICAGO, July 9—A brisk advance got under way in the wheat pit on the board of trade today and prices climbed as much as 3 cents a bushel. Other grains advanced in sympathy.

September wheat shot up to 83½ cents in a fast trade on buying for short and long account while corn gained better than a cent to 76½ cents for the active delivery. Oats moved up around a cent and rye gained more than a cent.

Further recovering in the Liverpool market and additional complaints of black rust damage in parts of the spring wheat territory were the principal influences. Kansas City advanced more than 3 cents.

NEW YORK, July 9—The stock market pushed ahead into new high ground for the year and the best levels since the fall of 1931 today as demand for the steels, mail orders and specialties continued unabated.

Trading was brisk with opening blocks of 1,000 to 4,500 shares frequent.

The negro had robbed 13 stores in Cleveland before being slain.

$3,500 PRICE RECOMMENDED FOR PARK SITE

Drive in Business District
for $1,650 Deficit Planned
Soon

TEN TO DO WORK

Offer of Ruggles' Four
Acres Rejected

The Haswell property of 11.6 acres in the east end of the city today had been recommended as the most logical site for a Circleville City park.

The recommendation was made by the site committee appointed a week ago by Joe W. Adkins, chairman of the general park committee. On the committee are Robert G. Colville, chairman; Frank A. Lynch, A. C. Cook, Mrs. Frank W. Robinson, and Harry Griner, engineer and technical advisor.

The committee after careful study of all available sites reported Monday evening at a general meeting that $3,500 should be offered to Mrs. George Haswell for the property.

Need Materials

An additional $1,500 will be needed, the committee reported, to purchase materials and other things necessary to put the property in condition after its purchase, if the $3,500 recommended is satisfactory to Mrs. Haswell.

It will be necessary to purchase tile, cement and other things.

O. S. Coffey, relief director, attended Monday evening's meeting and said he believed the park could be approved immediately as a FERA project. Circleville is short at the present in FERA projects since the city has no money with which to purchase materials.

At present there is about $3,500 in the committee's treasury, a deficit of $1,650 from the amount recommended by the site committee. It is planned, Chairman Adkins said today, to conduct a spirited campaign in the business district in an effort to raise this money. Ten business men will be named within the next day or two to conduct the drive which will be held probably late this week or early next.

Awaiting Selection

Many persons who are able to contribute to the park fund have been holding back waiting the selection of the site. It is hoped by the committee that the site selected is satisfactory to all concerned.

It would provide a splendid playground. The land extends on both sides of Hargus creek with the stream winding its way through the 11.6 acres. Some work will be necessary on the stream to guard against overflow of water which Mr. Griner reported he believed could be well handled.

There are sufficient frame buildings already on the property. The committee reported, to construct shelter houses and other necessary buildings without added expense.

The site committee reluctantly reported that it would have to decline the liberal offer of the Ruggles heirs of a gift of their 4-acre tract of land as part of the park. Engineer Griner informed the committee that to get to the Ruggles land as a park it would be necessary to construct a roadway at a cost of approximately $10,000. The spirit in which the Ruggles land was offered, however, is deeply appreciated by the committee.

Duty to Contribute

With the persons interested doing everything in their power to provide Circleville with a park, it is the duty of each citizen to do what he can to make the project a possibility. There are many who can give if they only will, and it is to these people that the committee is making its appeal.

The park when completed would be turned over to the city as a municipal institution.

New Arrivals

Mr. and Mrs. Grayson Ferguson, Town-at, announce the birth of a daughter Tuesday morning.

Mrs. Amy Elvira Routt died Tuesday at 2:30 a. m. at her home near Kingston.

She leaves three sons, Leroy and Neal of Kingston, Fred of Columbus, and a daughter, Nell at home; four brothers, Isaac Rossiter of Whisler, Sylvester, Humphrey and Tom of Ross-co, and a sister, Miss Sarah Lawrence of Dayton. Her husband and three children preceded her in death.

The funeral will be at the home Thursday at 2 p. m. with Rev. C. Stump officiating and burial in Mt. Pleasant cemetery by Shannon and Hill.

County Office News.

Claims amounting to about $200 for sheep killed or wounded during the past month were ordered paid Monday by the county commissioners who at the same time rejected payment of a larger sum claiming that the valuation placed on the animals was too high.

The claims rejected were Thomas Decker, $23 for two sheep and one lamb; Victor Ater, $110 for 13 sheep and two lambs; C. E. Dick, $60 and Festus Hill, $272.50 for an unannounced number of sheep.

The bond of Treasurer-Elect Robert G. Colville was fixed at $50,000 Monday by the commissioners. Mr. Colville takes office in September.

Three person, Lizzie Reed of Ashville, T. E. Tilley of Walnut-twp, and Milton Kendall of Deer-creek-twp, were warranted to the county home Monday by the commissioners.

The bid of Paul Johnson of $12.50 to clean and overhaul two typewriters in the recorder's office was accepted by the commissioners.

The Johnson Insurance Agency was instructed Monday by the commissioners to refund the premium for insurance on the Studebaker recently sold on a trade-in by the sheriff's office for a new Ford V-8 and to insure the new car.

Operation of New Combine by Thomas Boys Drawing Attention of Throng

Another marvel of the machine age—a combine, a mechanical device which cuts and threshes wheat in one process, was the object of much interest at the Thomas farm in Wayne-twp Monday afternoon.

Farmers, town folk and travelers, stopped along Route 22 to see the machine work. They looked on in awe as it cut through the field, harvesting, threshing and dumping the wheat into a truck in one operation.

Only three persons are needed to operate the machine, one to drive the tractor which pulls the combine, another to guide and watch over the combine, and a third to drive the truck to take the threshed grain.

Labor-saving, money-saving—it certainly is! It is said that the average farmer spends about $300 at threshing time. This machine eliminates the use of about 10 men at harvesting time and about 20 or 25 at threshing time.

And, too, the women folk who always have had to worry about preparing a threshing dinner, (and what dinners they usually are!), no longer have to worry because now they have to feed but three men.

Kermit and Howard Thomas, sons of the late Joe

Thomas, one of Wayne-twp's best known farmers, purchased the combine this year. The price of a good combine, according to hardware merchants, is $1,750.

The Thomas brothers started harvesting one of their wheat fields yesterday but discovered that the recent heavy rains had so toughened the grain that it was impractical to continue. They intend to wait a day or two before they start again.

Two trips around the 35-acre field in which they were harvesting netted the Thomases 40 bushels, filling a bin atop the combine. Samples of this grain tested fairly good, according to elevator workmen at the Ralston-Purina west side plant.

It is worth the time of one living in this machine age to see the combine work. It will probably be in operation, weather permitting, during the next week.

WHEAT, OTHER MARTS CLIMB

Local Company Offers Three Cents More Than Monday;
Rust Damage Cause.

The price of wheat started on the road to recovery today as the Eshelman Mill, from which firm The Herald obtains its grain market reports, offered three cents more per bushel than it did at the close of the market Monday.

The price offered to farmers at the mill Monday and until the close Tuesday was 69 cents while today's quotation was 72 cents. This recovery after a drop of seven cents in two days last week is good news to Pickaway-co's farmers who watch the wheat market like a hawk watches a chicken at this time of the year.

The price offered for white and yellow corn by the Eshelman firm also showed an increase, both bringing an offer two cents better than Monday.

CHICAGO, July 9.—A brisk advance got under way in the wheat pit on the board of trade today and prices climbed as much as 3 cents a bushel. Other grains advanced in sympathy.

September wheat shot up to 83½ cents in a fast trade on buying for short and long account while corn gained better than a cent to 76½ cents for the active delivery. Oats moved up around a cent and rye gained more than a cent.

Further recovering in the Liverpool market and additional complaints of black rust damage in parts of the spring wheat territory were the principal influences. Kansas City advanced more than 3 cents.

NEW YORK, July 9.—The stock market pushed ahead into new high ground for the year and the best levels since the fall of 1931 today as demand for the steels, mail orders and specialties continued unabated.

Trading was brisk with opening blocks of 1,000 to 4,500 shares frequent.

NEGRO WANTED IN ROBBERIES SLAIN

Sheriff Charles Radcliff announced today that John Henry Preston, 31-year-old negro whom he has been seeking for three Ashville robberies was killed Monday in Cleveland when he tried to rob a store.

Detective Harry Mobley of the Cleveland force shot him through the head.

Preston aided in robbery of the Beckett store, Morris hardware store and the Grove and Rhodes store in the Harrison-twp village, the sheriff claims.

The negro had robbed 13 stores in Cleveland before being slain.

WELCH IN RACE FOR CONGRESS

The congressional campaign, in which a successor to Congressman Mel G. Underwood will be named, has been opened.

Mr. Welch, former resident of this city and a property owner here, is a member of the Democratic State Speakers bureau and has been busy the last six months making addresses in various parts of the state.

He was arrested as a member of a ring which was allegedly operating in central Ohio looting numerous farms. Others including Curtis Byas and Lewis White are now serving time in the Ohio reformatory at Mansfield for their part in the theft ring.

Clark was tried first in Madison-twp but a jury was not able to agree. He was brought here for trial rather than be held there until a second trial could be ordered.

CHILD SLAYER ENTERS DENIAL

Goodrich Pleads Not Guilty
In First Degree Murder
Hearing; Wife Absent.

DETROIT, July 9.—Merton Ward Goodrich, confessed killer of 11-year-old Lillian Gallagher, pleaded not guilty today when arraigned on charges of first degree murder.

Goodrich did not know what Judge Thomas M. Cotter meant when he asked if the defendant wanted an examination, Judge Cotter explained the procedure.

"I guess I can waive that," Goodrich said.

Mrs. Goodrich's faithful wife who obtained her husband's release from the Lima, O. hospital for the criminal insane, and later fled from Detroit with him after his crimes against children had culminated in the murder of Lillian, was not in court for the arraignment.

Judge Cotter ordered him held without bond.

A crowd, mostly women, jammed the courtroom as the prisoner was brought in. Goodrich was nervous and shaking. He asked for a drink of water, and one of his hands was freed from his shackles to allow him to drink.

He ground his teeth and muttered when photographers' flashlights boomed.

TRIO EXECUTED IN ILLINOIS MURDER

MENARD, Ill., July 9.—On the scales of justice today three deaths balanced one.

The three were those of Edward Balling, 19, John Krul, 21, and Van Buren Dedmon, 25, executed in the electric chair shortly after midnight at the southern Illinois prison here.

They died for having killed William C. Moss, 66-year-old East St. Louis motorman in a cheap robbery on February 22.

Last minute efforts by relatives to save them were fruitless and Krul was led into the death chamber shortly after midnight and pronounced dead at 12:14 a. m. Balling was dead at 12:23 a. m. Dedmon, smallest of the trio, walked in still limping from a bullet-wound he got in his last holdup. His voice was strong and sure as he thanked prison officials and pleaded forgiveness of his sins. It took six charges to kill him.

$3,500 PRICE RECOMMENDED FOR PARK SITE

Drive in Business District
for $1,650 Deficit Planned
Soon

TEN TO DO WORK

Offer of Ruggles' Four
Acres Rejected

The Haswell property of 11.6 acres in the east end of the city today had been recommended as the most logical site for a Circleville City park.

The recommendation was made by the site committee appointed a week ago by Joe W. Adkins, chairman of the general park committee. On the committee are Robert G. Colville, chairman; Frank A. Lynch, A. C. Cook, Mrs. Ward W. Robinson, and Harry Griner, engineer and technical advisor.

The committee after careful study of all available sites reported Monday evening at a general meeting that $3,500 should be offered to Mrs. George Haswell for the property.

Need Materials

An additional $1,500 will be needed, the committee reported, to purchase materials and other things necessary to put the property in condition after its purchase, if the $3,500 recommended is satisfactory to Mrs. Haswell.

It will be necessary to purchase tile, cement and other things.

O. S. Coffey, relief director, attended Monday evening's meeting and said he believed the park could be approved immediately as an FERA project. Circleville is short at the present in FERA projects since the city has no money with which to purchase materials.

At present there is about $3,500 in the committee's treasury, a deficit of $1,650 from the amount recommended by the site committee. It is planned, Chairman Adkins said today, to conduct a spirited campaign in the business district in an effort to raise this money. Ten business men will be named within the next day or two to conduct the drive which will be held probably late this week or early next.

Awaiting Selection

Many persons who are able to contribute to the park fund have been holding back waiting the selection of the site. It is hoped by the committee that the site selected is satisfactory to all concerned.

It would provide a splendid playground. The land extends on both sides of Hargus creek with the stream winding its way through the 11.6 acres. Some work will be necessary on the stream to guard against overflow of water which Mr. Griner reported he believed could be well handled.

There are sufficient frame buildings already on the property, the committee reported, to construct shelter houses and other necessary buildings without added expense.

The site committee reluctantly reported that it would have to decline the liberal offer of the Ruggles heirs of a gift of their 4-acre tract of land as part of the park. Engineer Griner informed the committee that to get to the Ruggles land as a park it would be necessary to construct a roadway at a cost of approximately $10,000. The spirit in which the Ruggles land was offered, however, is deeply appreciated by the committee.

Duty to Contribute

With the persons interested doing everything in their power to provide Circleville with a park, it is the duty of each citizen to do what he can to make the project a possibility. There are many who can give if they only will, and it is to these people that the committee is making its appeal.

The park when completed would be turned over to the city as a municipal institution.

USE CALLS NEW DEALERS

Hearing on Utility Bill Lobbying Begins in Same Room in Which Wirt Was Heard

WASHINGTON, July 9.—President Roosevelt's youthful New Dealers faced congressional inquisitors for a second time today as the House rules committee weighed charge of administration lobbying for utility legislation.

In the same spacious caucus room where Dr. William Wirt, Gary, Ind., educator, last year accused brain trusters of radicalism, the committee will sift allegations that White House aides sought to influence votes for the holding company "death sentence" with federal work funds.

The first of the president's advisers to be summoned before the investigators will be Thomas Corcoran, RFC counsel, who collaborated with Benjamin Cohen, PWA official, in drafting the administration holding company bill.

Corcoran was charged by Rep. Brewster (R) of Maine with having threatened to withdraw public works funds from the passamagoodly tidal project in his state unless he voted for the "death sentence."

Brewster's accusation voiced on the House floor following passage of the utility bill precipitated the inquiry. He will open the hearings with a renewal of his assertions.

Attorney General Edward L. O'Connor of Iowa, above, has been indicted by the grand jury at Sioux City on charges of graft and corruption in public office. O'Connor and his assistant, Walter Maley, also indicted, are alleged to be connected with a slot machine and gambling syndicate.

Train Leaves For Ethiopian Frontier

ADDIS ABABA, July 9.—In an atmosphere heavy with foreboding, a train left for the Ethiopian frontier today crowded with American, British and Italian refugees.

They represented the first contingent of foreign residents leaving at the urgent request of their respective governments due to growing belief hostilities will soon commence between Italy and Abyssinia.

Among those departing were three wagon-loads of little girls, born of Italian fathers and Abyssinian mothers, and educated by Catholic nuns at the Maria Della Consolata mission boarding-school in Addis Ababa.

Guarded in Transit

Under special guard, the girls started the long trip to Italy. The extraordinary measures taken to ensure their safe transit was so marked that International News Service was prompted to ask an Italian official at the railway station why such importance was attached to the children.

"They are the future mothers of a new and more ennobled generation that is going to inhabit the country that was called Abyssinia," he said.

Meanwhile, the various legations here sent instructions to mission schools in the interior to concentrate their pupils at Addis Ababa to facilitate general evacuation.

HANKOW CITY FEARS FLOOD

Raging Yangtze Threatens Thousands of Lives; Americans Thought Safe.

HANKOW, July 9.—Flood waters of the raging Yangtze river, spreading death and destruction over hundreds of fertile square miles, today threatened to rise into Hankow city, with its jammed population of 1,500,000.

The large cities of Shashi, Changteh, and Kiukiang are already partly under water, and several villages have been destroyed with a loss of life that may run into the hundreds.

Stricken peasants, their crops destroyed and their homes flooded, fled to precarious refuge on the crumbling levees, where hunger and disease began to add their toll.

Railway communication between Hankow and Peiping has been suspended.

There is a sizeable colony of American missionaries and business men at Hankow, but they are believed to be in no immediate danger.

American gunboats are anchored in the river, ready to aid in rescue work if needed.

At least 12 lives were lost in this city, one of the hardest hit, and more than $2,000,000 property damage done. Water stood from three to 12 feet deep in the streets.

While reports from other points put the total known dead at 47, there were reports of at least 20 additional deaths which could not be confirmed because of paralyzed communication facilities. Scores were unaccounted for.

HOUSE CALLS NEW DEALERS

Hearing on Utility Bill Lobbying Begins in Same Room in Which Wirt Was Heard

WASHINGTON, July 9.—President Roosevelt's youthful New Dealers faced congressional inquisitors for a second time today as the House rules committee weighed charge of administration lobbying for utility legislation.

In the same spacious caucus room where Dr. William Wirt, Gary, Ind., educator, last year accused brain trusters of radicalism, the committee will sift allegations that White House aides sought to influence votes for the holding company "death sentence" with federal work funds.

The first of the president's advisers to be summoned before the investigators will be Thomas Corcoran, RFC counsel, who collaborated with Benjamin Cohen, PWA official, in drafting the administration holding company bill.

Corcoran was charged by Rep. Brewster (R) of Maine with having threatened to withdraw public works funds from the passamaguddy tidal project in his state unless he voted for the "death sentence."

Brewster's accusation voiced on the House floor following passage of the utility bill precipitated the inquiry. He will open the hearings with a renewal of his assertions.

Attorney General O'Connor

Attorney General Edward L. O'Connor of Iowa, above, has been indicted by the grand jury at Sioux City on charges of graft and corruption in public office. O'Connor and his assistant, Walter Maley, also indicted, are alleged to be connected with a slot machine and gambling syndicate.

Mussolini Says 'No'

Although Great Britain expressed a willingness in conversations with Italy to give Ethiopia a corridor to the sea (Zeilah), if she would make concessions to Italy, Premier Benito Mussolini rejected the plan. This is the first time in modern history that Great Britain ever has offered to give up any land.

tile measures undertaken by the British government to avert war.

STOCKHOLM—Sweden rejected Ethiopia's request for permission to enroll Swedish aviators as flying instructors in the Abyssinian army.

LONDON—A Reuter dispatch from Rome reported Italy may launch decisive campaign in Ethiopia before the League of Nations meets to consider the situation on August 25.

Train Leaves For Ethiopian Frontier

ADDIS ABABA, July 9.—In an atmosphere heavy with foreboding, a train left for the Ethiopian frontier today crowded with American, British and Italian refugees. They represented the first contingent of foreign residents leaving at the urgent request of their respective governments due to growing belief hostilities will soon commence between Italy and Abyssinia.

Among those departing were three wagon-loads of little girls, born of Italian fathers and Abyssinian mothers and educated by Catholic nuns at the Maria Della Consolata mission boarding school in Addis Ababa.

Guarded in Transit

Under special guard, the girls started the long trip to Italy. The extraordinary measures taken to ensure their safe transit was so marked that International News Service was prompted to ask an Italian official at the railway station why such importance was attached to the children.

"They are the future mothers of a new and more ennobled generation that is going to inhabit the country that was called Abyssinia," he said.

Meanwhile, the various legations here sent instructions to mission schools in the interior to concentrate their pupils at Addis Ababa to facilitate general evacuation.

HANKOW CITY FEARS FLOOD

Raging Yangtze Threatens
Thousands of Lives; Americans Thought Safe.

HANKOW, July 9.—Flood waters of the raging Yangtze river, spreading death and destruction over hundreds of fertile square miles, today threatened to rise into Hankow city, with its jammed population of 1,500,000.

The large cities of Shashi, Changteh, and Kiukiang are already partly under water, and several villages have been destroyed with a loss of life that may run into the hundreds.

Stricken peasants, their crops destroyed and their homes flooded, fled to precarious refuge on the crumbling levees, where hunger and disease began to add their toll.

Railway communication between Hankow and Peiping has been suspended.

There is a sizeable colony of American missionaries and business men at Hankow, but they are believed to be in no immediate danger.

American gunboats are anchored in the river, ready to aid in rescue work if needed.

Josephine Roche, left, assistant secretary of the treasury and Aubrey Williams, assistant federal emergency relief administrator, are the directors of the new National Youth Administration which has been allocated $50,000,000 from the $4,000,000,000 work relief fund by President Roosevelt to assist 500,000 needy youths in obtaining a good start in life. Miss Roche has been named chairman of a special executive committee to administer the program and Williams has been appointed executive director of the newest New Deal agency. abandoned villages of Painted Post and Hornell.

Forces of the Red Cross, CCC, sanitary engineers, highway engineers, social welfare workers and dozens of voluntary groups toiled feverishly.

The halls of Cornell university, located high on the Ithaca hills, were being used as first aid stations to hundreds suffering from injuries and exposure.

At least 12 lives were lost in this city, one of the hardest hit, and more than $2,000,000 property damage done. Water stood from three to 12 feet deep in the streets.

While reports from other points put the total known dead at 47, there were reports of at least 20 additional deaths which could not be confirmed because of paralyzed communication facilities. Scores were unaccounted for.

100 Bridges Wrecked

Transportation was still at a virtual standstill, with about a dozen trains marooned between washouts or held at stations. Mile after mile of tracks and highways and nearly a hundred bridges have been swept away or so weakened they are unsafe.

Emergency train crews and highway workers labored at restoring skeleton transportation.

Creative enterprise is not stimulated by vast inheritances. They bless neither those who bequeath nor those who receive.—President Roosevelt.

Directs a Lobby?

J. J. Pelley

Railroad brotherhoods have submitted evidence to the senate committee investigating railroads purporting to show that railroad companies, although hard up, are appropriating large sums to fight measures before congress. The brotherhoods assert that the head of this lobby is J. J. Pelley, above, president of the Association of American Railroads, whose salary is $6,000 a year. Pelley was president of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad until last year.

YOUTH IS JAILED IN RADIO THEFT

COLUMBUS, July 1.—Arrested after he was alleged to have fired four shots at a watchman, all of which missed their mark, Raymond G. Brower, 19, son of a local investment-broker, today was taken to police headquarters.

Lewis Dale, the watchman, said he interrupted a burglary of Ohio State University's radio station, WOSU, and was fired upon by young Brower.

Dale's assailant escaped, but from information the watchman furnished police, Brower was arrested at his home a short time later. Police quoted him as admitting he had taken equipment from the radio station.

Secretary of State May Submit Names of Those Not Filing Accounts.

COLUMBUS, July 9.—Only 42 out of 200 lobbyists about the state capital filed expense accounts by the end of June, State Secretary George Myers announced today.

Mr. Myers said the names of those not having filed the necessary report of expenses will be turned over to the Attorney General's office for action under the statute requiring lobbyists to list particularized expense sheets.

B. D. Lecklider, lobbyist for the Ohio Casualty Co. and other stock and mutual insurance companies, filed an account of having spent $2,240, during the last legislative session. Mr. Myers did not indicate whether any investigation would be made as to this expense account, although officials stated that the amount appeared to be too high for just the expense items listed.

E. E. Tharp, lobbying for the Wholesale Beer Association of Ohio, listed $171 in expense for a keg party at the Neil House and for 20 cases of beer to the legislative correspondents at the capital. In contrast, S. P. McNaught, of the Anti-Saloon league, listed $3 expense for registration fee.

329 Traffic Signals on State Highways Approved

Program of the State Highway Department to bring about regulation of traffic lights on state highways within municipalities of less than 5,000 population and at rural intersections shows that of the 423 traffic lights on the state highway system 329 are authorized and 94 are unauthorized.

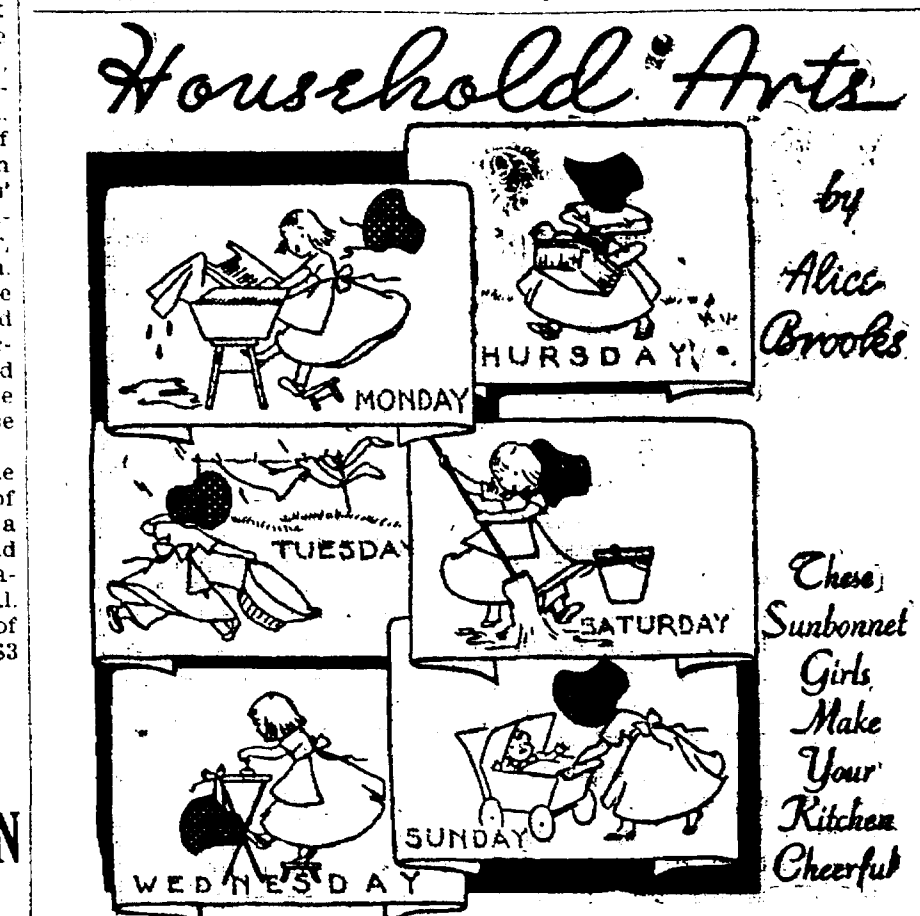

The majority of the 94 unauthorized signals, Highway Director John Jaster, Jr., announced, are either obsolete in point of equipment or represent installations not in accord with the proposed code of signal installation and operation of the Highway Department.

The unauthorized signals include 86 urban and 8 rural lights. Of the 36 urban signals, 73 are active and 13 inactive. All eight rural signals are active.

The 329 authorized traffic signals embrace 287 urban and 42 rural lights. All are active except six of the urban signals. Included in the tabulation are 10 authorized and 3 unauthorized "school signals."

In addition to the data relating only to "stop and go" traffic control signals, Highway Director Jaster cited, there are 10 flashing caution signals being operated. Municipalities under 5,000 population cannot erect traffic lights on state highways passing through their limits without permission of the State Highway Director.

329 Traffic Signals on State Highways Approved

Program of the State Highway Department to bring about regulation of traffic lights on state highways within municipalities of less than 5,000 population and at rural intersections shows that of the 423 traffic lights on the state highway system 329 are authorized and 94 are unauthorized.

The majority of the 94 unauthorized signals, Highway Director John Jaster, Jr., announced, are either obsolete in point of equipment or represent installations not in accord with the proposed code of signal installation and operation of the Highway Department.

The unauthorized signals include 86 urban and 8 rural lights. Of the 86 urban signals, 73 are active and 13 inactive. All eight rural signals are active.

The 329 authorized traffic signals embrace 287 urban and 42 rural lights. All are active except six of the urban signals.

Included in the tabulation are 10 authorized and 3 unauthorized "school signals."

In addition to the data relating only to "stop and go" traffic control signals, Highway Director Jaster cited, there are 10 flashing caution signals being operated.

Municipalities under 5,000 population cannot erect traffic lights on state highways passing through their limits without permission of the State Highway Director.

WHY A NEWSPAPER?

THE merchant who says that everyone knows his place of business, and therefore he doesn't have to advertise, may be found right here, as well as other communities in the country.

Sure, most of the people, who have lived in the community, do know his place of business. They also know where the village cemetery is located but few have the desire to be its "regular customer". So it is with the merchant. People know where he is, but he must put into them the desire to come to it. Advertising is his best means to put his sales talk across in a wholesome way.

The merchant who says that customers come to him when in need of goods he handles and wants to know why he should "waste" his money in advertising, can find the answer to that question, made by a newspaper.

It follows:

"Everyone in this community knows all that happens here, so what is the use of reporting the news, what's the use of having a newspaper?" If the community can get along without a newspaper, it can get along without a number of other things, which are of value. For instance, the adults are educated and can teach the children, thus doing away with the schools. The parents are religious, therefore, they can train the young ones in the creeds, thus doing away with ministers and churches. Folks can lend money to one another, and thereby eliminate banks. They can swap their old clothes or learn how to make homespun, thereby greatly reducing expenses and actually putting the clothing merchant out of business.

All trade is based upon a desire for all goods. Necessity is, mostly, an augmented desire. Advertising has the function of reminding people of their requirements, but its greatest function—a prime factor in all progress and prosperity—is the creation of new desires; therefore stimulating trade and production and making for the greatest possible amount of employment.

PROGRESS?

ONE of the more recent reports of the League of Nations would seem to indicate that the international money situation has eased up a bit. It shows that more than $4,000,000,000 in gold was expended by the nations for armaments last year. Basing its figures on the old parity, disregarding depreciation, the report finds this to be an increase of $450,000,000 over 1933.

Is this progress? Only along certain lines. This huge investment with the merchants of death represents progress toward barbarism. How could it be otherwise when the money has been spent in the development of means of torture and of destruction?

With this money how many hospitals and orphanages, institutions for scientific research, schools and dispensaries could have been built and how many starving and suffering members of the human race could have been relieved? But instead, governments led by men afflicted with a militaristic obsession crush and grind and bleed their people so that the money may be provided, even in these times of world-wide impoverishment, to prepare for action the vast machinery employed by so-called civilized nations for the grim purpose of annihilation.

When a hard pressed world, struggling desperately, for the most part, to assemble the mere necessities of life, witnesses this agonizing and cruel waste of money as a means to the production of more misery, it is not surprising that the urge to rebel stirs in human breasts.

LOAFING TIME

SPRING FEVER makes dullards of us all but even that tired feeling of May and June is as boundless pep compared with the lassitude of July and August. When summer's heat is at its height leisure becomes a necessity rather than a luxury.

No need to apologize for being just lazy at this season. Chances are the other fellow is taking things just as easy as you. It is no crime to loiter under a fan, lounge in the woods, float in the water or doze beside a trout hole when the mercury is hovering around the century mark. Punishment is deserved only by those supermen who hustle around and make everybody else feel shiftless.

No matter what their occupation none expend as much energy in July and August as in January. The hand that pushes the pen moves slower, the fingers that press the typewriter keys slacken their pace, the machine's speed slows down to keep pace with the guiding hand and mind and the mind directing the huge organization adopts a new and slower tempo.

Leisure is expressed in July and August through various forms of doing nothing. An active vacation is nine-tenths loafing and one-tenth searching for a place to cool off and rest.

STORMY LOVE

A YOUNG NAVY MAN'S ROMANCE BELLE BURNS GROMER

CHAPTER 49

ON A SUNDAY morning—the Prestons' thirteenth day at the lake—Towner and Bud, who had camped overnight at the coral came the final miles to stow rugs and bedding, leave the cabin in shipshape order and then to return Lia and Val to civilization.

When his bag was packed Val went out to the porch and stood there smoking nervously. His eyes rested on the blue lake and the foot-hills where tall cedars climbed like an army of green-clad giants; but despite the serenity of the scene, his mind was troubled.

On the surface, this interval at Paradise lake seemed to have solved many problems, thought Val as they prepared to leave for civilization. After long days in the open Lia and he were physically in top-hole condition; they had achieved a new and pleasant companionship; and from the night of their reconciliation, he had—strangely enough—lost his intense desire for liquor.

But they had come to no definite understanding about their future. Both of them had avoided any frank discussion of their difficulties. And even if he had fallen under Lia's spell once more, still he believed it had only been to keep the peace that he had permitted her to think he might carry out her wishes about the invention.

As he turned to watch his wife who had paused in the doorway to light a cigarette, it struck him that she had grown greatly in beauty during her enforced holiday. Her smoothly tanned flesh had a warm peach-like underglow, and her eyes were clear and bright, small rounded figure seemed to radiate a new vitality. He liked the plain outdoor clothes she wore. How he had hated those silky satin robes, the musky perfume and the Venetian braids that until this salutary experience had become so much a part of her. Thank God, she was back to normal once more!

"Want to walk up to the trout stream for a last look?" he asked with his amiable blue-eyed smile. "Towner still has some odd jobs to do and we can take the time."

They had both loved the spot by the jade green waters where they had passed their happy hours in the sunlight, so that now her reaction to his suggestion took him by surprise. "Don't be sentimental, Val," she drawled. "Of course I don't want to walk that distance when we have such a long ride ahead. Come and close my bag, will you?"

She turned away and he stood motionless for a space. For days she had been gay, understanding, tractable. But now he sensed a subtle change in her, a fresh withdrawal. Later, when Towner called, "All aboard, folks," Val went slowly down the steps and lifted his wife to the saddle. As the horses moved forward to make the green shadow of the timber, he turned back for one last glimpse of the cabin and their enchanted lake. But Lia, he saw, had gone straight on without once looking behind her.

On Monday morning, when Val returned for duty, he found that much radio traffic had been coming through communications; and with the enthusiasm born of a healthy body and renewed interest in his job, he delayed into the stack of paper work he found waiting on his desk.

At noon he decided not to take time off for luncheon but asked Dyer to tell Opal to send him a sandwich and to inform Mrs. Preston he would not be home until six-thirty at the earliest. But just after midday Brad Norris came through the doorway and at sight of the man's gray face Val knew that something serious was in the air.

"What's wrong?" he demanded as he led his friend into an inner office where they could be alone. Brad, he thought, had aged five years since their last meeting.

The other man dropped into a chair and lit a cigarette with fingers that trembled. "I've had a tough jolt, fellah," he said huskily. "It is Sue. It's—awful, she has always been high-strung—nervous—you know. But a week ago last Tuesday she went all to pieces." He lifted gray eyes, sick with misery, to meet Val's. "Sue isn't herself, see? I came back from California to find her in a bed state. I don't know why. That's the devil of it. I can't get her to talk, to tell me what's wrong. I thought she acted queerly when I returned home that night. Sort of rambled when she spoke. Then, a while later, she got hysterical. And finally when I couldn't quiet her and telephoned a doctor—she, well, I had a hard time handling her."

"Brad, this is terrible! Terrible! Val had risen to pace the room.

"From that night we had two nurses to watch her," the young aviator went on, "and later I had to give in and take her to a private sanitarium in Seattle for observation. Her father is coming today from the east. And this afternoon the doctors will give us the verdict." He put his head into his hands. After a time he spoke again in the same low, monotonous tone. "They say she isn't very strong and that she has a shock of some sort. She is very emotional, you know. But the part that hits hardest is that she has turned against me—can't bear the sight of me."

Val put a tight hand on his friend's shoulder. "Is there anything under the sun I can do to help?" he demanded. "Just name it. Come and stay with us until Sue is better. You can't leave her alone. Let Lia and me help some way."

The other man shook his head. "Good of you to offer but I couldn't. Is—Lia all right?"

"She's well, thanks. We've been off on my leave, you know. I can't leave her alone. Let Lia and me help some way."

"The other man shook his head. "Good of you to offer but I couldn't. Is—Lia all right?"

"You can depend on me not to mention it, Brad. We've always been sort of like brothers—haven't we? Lord, fellah, I'd give the world to be able to help you."

"Too late to do anything now. And the rotten part of it is, I have only myself to blame," the man said bitterly. "The navy was my job. I loved it and I should have stuck to it. I thought I was doing the right thing when I tossed away my career. I should have looked out for Sue. There are other ways of taking care of your wife than just by giving her what money can buy."

"And even there I have failed. I've lost everything I made on the market. I can't even keep up my payments on the house. That has hurt Sue. She is awfully proud, you know. Of course, I have my job left. It's hers were like those of a man on the rack. I've got to hang onto that job," he said slowly. "No matter what happens, I don't dare lose it. Sue must have every comfort I can give her, now. I must hang on to this job."

"Buck up, kid! Sue is going to come through. A nervous breakdown isn't always serious." "If she pulls out of this I won't ask anything else. I—guess you know how I feel about my wife. She is all that counts with me." He turned away with an abrupt gesture of finality and stride from the room.

Back at his desk Val tried to lose himself in his task; but now thoughts of Brad's tragedy kept thrusting in to distract him. At five o'clock, he could stand it no longer. The work that remained could easily go over until tomorrow. He gave the nurse final instructions, caught up his cap and went out.

Once in the open, he stood uncertainly for a moment then crossed to his quarters to enter through an empty kitchen. Opal, he thought, must be busy in the front of the house, and he was relieved that she was not there to inform his wife of his presence. Lia would be quick to guess that something was wrong and he didn't want her to know about Sue. She had never liked Brad's wife. And anyway, he wished to be alone.

As Val went through the hallway toward the small study, he noticed that the passage was blue with cigarette smoke, but since he heard no voices from the living room, concluded that Stephen Garenne probably had been there and had gone again after one of his brief visits with his daughter.

Dead in his own thoughts he closed the study door, noisily behind him, tossed his cap into a chair, and commenced a restless pacing of the small room. "It didn't seem possible that Sue and Brad—so young and happy—such a short while ago—had come to this disaster! His eyes darkened. Brad's memory was mixed up in his mind. The devil of it was that even if Brad guessed the truth, he was helpless to do anything about it. As he said, Sue must have every care. And in these precarious times, it was a life and death matter that he hang onto his job."

THEATRES

AT THE CLIFTONA

An engrossing narrative of a powerful racketeer who runs afoul of the law on income tax evasion provides the story of "The People's Enemy," the new picture at the Cliftona Theatre, Wednesday.

The story was written by Edward Dean Sullivan, popular writer whose action tales on crime have been accepted as authoritative by his large reading public. This time, Sullivan draws his yarn from the headlines, revealing a little known aspect of the racketeer's life—his career behind the bars.

Select Productions assembled a fine all-star cast to depict the important characters in "The People's Enemy." Preston Foster is impressive in the title role. Melvyn Douglas offers a portrayal of a silver-tongued criminal lawyer. Lia Lee is sympathetic as the convict's wife and the lawyer's friend. Other roles are portrayed by Shirley Grey, Roscoe Ates, Herbert Rawlinson and William Collier, Jr. RKO-Radio releases.

AT THE CIRCLE

Bill Cody, as the Pinto Kid, and his trick horse "Chico" ride to new glory in "FRONTIER DAYS," a spectacular Western thriller that is now showing at the Circle Theatre.

It's a rip-roaring, bang-up Western drama with thrilling sequences of sensational riding, daring gun play, rough-and-tumble fist fights, with a sweet romance interwoven under the smart direction of Bob Hill.

The beautiful Ada Ince playing opposite Cody supplies the charm and character of Western femininity. Wheeler Oakman, the bad man of the movies, gives a powerful and convincing portrayal of the villain, while Bill Cody, Jr., and Vic Portel round out a cast of characters with excellent performances.

"The Hell Cat," featuring Robert Armstrong and Ann Southern, opens at the Grand Wednesday.

Poems That Live

A MILE WITH ME

Oh, who will walk a mile with me,
Along life's merry way?
A comrade blithe and full of glee,
Who dares to laugh out loud and free,
And let his frolic fancy play,
Like a happy child, through the flowers gay
That fill the field and fringe the way,
Where he walks a mile with me.

And who will walk a mile with me,
Along life's weary way?
A friend whose heart has eyes to see
The stars shine out o'er the darkening lea,
And the quiet rest at the end of the day—
A friend who knows and dares to say,
The brave, sweet words that cheer the way
Where he walks a mile with me.

With such a comrade, such a friend,
I fail would walk till journeys end,
Through summer sunshine, winter rain,
And then? Farewell, we shall meet again

Bidding went: West, 1-Club; East, 2-No Trumps; West, 3-No Trumps.

The opening lead was the Q of diamonds, removing dummy's only card of re-entry, aside from its long club suit.

Declarer hoped the clubs were established, although a six-card suit never must be considered safely established unless headed by the four top honors. The Ace of clubs was led. North discarded a low spade, showing that declarer must twice lead clubs from his own hand or avoid loss of a trick in the suit. He had a certain card of entry in spades and one in diamonds. He needed another sure entry in hearts. East should have proceeded as given. Lead a heart from dummy. Play the

Q. Declarer needs only his six clubs, two diamonds and a single trick in both spades and hearts to make 4-odd. Lose to South's Ace, and that player will take out East's high diamond. Lead a low club. To avoid being picked up South must put up his 10 of clubs. Win with the Q. Lead back a heart and win with the K. Lead back declarer's last club, picking up both of South's cards of that suit and thus run off four tricks. Discard both lower spades and two last diamond from declarer's hand. If the two defenders discard to the best advantage, North will hold only the Q of spades, the good J of hearts and a single diamond. East will hold the lone Ace of spades and his 9-4 of hearts. South will have the K-J of spades and a good diamond. Declarer will win only one of the last three tricks, giving defenders two tricks, and making 4-odd.

Unfortunately for East, having taken the first two tricks in dummy, he led a club from his own hand, and was forced to lead that suit from dummy, costing him game, as South's J-10 blocked clubs. A heart was led from dummy, declarer's Q losing to South's Ace. Back came the J of diamonds, taking out declarer's last stop to the suit.

The avoid greater loss in case he did anything else, declarer took dummy's single club trick, his own K of hearts and Ace of spades, going down two tricks just because he had carelessly led a club from his own hand, when he should have led a heart from dummy. Of course the declarer gave the usual excuse: "I was thinking one trick ahead of play."

WHY A NEWSPAPER?

THE merchant who says that everyone knows his place of business, and therefore he doesn't have to advertise, may be found right here, as well as other communities in the country.

Sure, most of the people, who have lived in the community, do know his place of business. They also know where the village cemetery is located but few have the desire to be its "regular customer".

So it is with the merchant. People know where he is, but he must put into them the desire to come to it. Advertising is his best means to put his sales talk across in a wholesome way.

The merchant who says that customers come to him when in need of goods he handles and wants to know why he should "waste" his money in advertising, can find the answer to that question, made by a newspaper.

It follows:
 "Everyone in this community knows all that happens here, so what is the use of reporting the news, what's the use of having a newspaper?" If the community can get along without a newspaper, it can get along without a number of other things, which are of value. For instance, the adults are educated and can teach the children, thus doing away with the schools. The parents are religious, therefore, they can train the young ones in the creeds, thus doing away with ministers and churches. Folks can lend money to one another, and thereby eliminate banks. They can swap their old clothes or learn how to make homespun, thereby greatly reducing expenses and actually putting the clothing merchant out of business.

All trade is based upon a desire for all goods. Necessity is, mostly, an augmented desire. Advertising has the function of reminding people of their requirements, but its greatest function—a prime factor in all progress and prosperity—is the creation of new desires; therefore stimulating trade and production and making for the greatest possible amount of employment.

PROGRESS?

ONE of the more recent reports of the League of Nations would seem to indicate that the international money situation has eased up a bit. It shows that more than $4,900,000,000 in gold was expended by the nations for armaments last year. Basing its figures on the old parity, disregarding depreciation, the report finds this to be an increase of $450,000,000 over 1933.

Is this progress? Only along certain lines. This huge investment with the merchants of death represents progress toward barbarism. How could it be otherwise when the money has been spent in the development of means of torture and of destruction?

With this money how many hospitals and orphanages, institutions for scientific research, schools and dispensaries could have been built and how many starving and suffering members of the human race could have been relieved? But, instead, governments led by men afflicted with a militaristic obsession crush and grind and bleed their people so that the money may be provided, even in these times of world-wide impoverishment, to prepare for action the vast machinery employed by so-called civilized nations for the grim purpose of annihilation.

When a hard pressed world, struggling desperately, for the most part, to assemble the mere necessities of life, witnesses this wanton and cruel waste of money as a means to the production of more misery, it is not surprising that the urge to rebel stirs in human breasts.

LOAFING TIME

SPRING FEVER makes dullards of us all but even that tired feeling of May and June is as boundless pep compared with the lassitude of July and August. When summer's heat is at its height leisure becomes a necessity rather than a luxury.

No need to apologize for being just lazy at this season. Chances are the other fellow is taking things just as easy as you. It is no crime to loiter under a fan, lounge in the woods, float in the water or doze beside a trout hole when the mercury is hovering around the century mark. Punishment is deserved only by those supermen who hustle around and make everybody else feel shiftless.

No matter what their occupation none expend as much energy in July and August as in January. The hand that pushes the pen moves slower, the fingers that press the typewriter keys slacken their pace, the machine's speed slows down to keep pace with the guiding hand and mind and the mind directing the huge organization adopts a new and slower tempo.

Leisure is expressed in July and August through various forms of doing nothing. An active vacation is nine-tenths loafing and one-tenth searching for a place to cool off and rest.

You can tell when the timid little woman is away. The brave he-man husband keeps all the lights burning.

STORMY LOVE

A YOUNG NAVY MAN'S ROMANCE BELLE BURNS GROMER

CHAPTER 49

ON A SUNDAY morning—the Prestons' thirteenth day at the lake—Townner and Bud, who had camped overnight at the corral, came the hundred miles to stow rugs and bedding, leave the cabin in shipshape order and then to return Lia and Val to civilization.

When his bag was packed Val went out to the porch and stood there smoking nervously. His eyes rested on the blue lake and the foot-hills where tall cedars climbed like an army of green-clad giants; but despite the serenity of the scene, his mind was troubled.

On the surface, this interval at Paradise lake seemed to have solved many problems, thought Val as they prepared to leave for civilization. After long days in the open Lia and he were physically in top-hole condition; they had achieved a new and pleasant companionship; and from the night of their reconciliation, he had—strangely enough—lost his intense desire for liquor.

But they had come to no definite understanding about their future. Both of them had avoided any frank discussion of their difficulties. And even if he had fallen under Lia's spell once more, still he believed it had only been to keep the peace that he had permitted her to think he might carry out her wishes about the invention.

As he turned to watch his wife who had paused in the doorway to light a cigarette, it struck him that she had grown greatly in beauty during her enforced holiday. Her smoothly tanned flesh had a warm peach-like underglow, dark eyes were clear and bright, small rounded figure seemed to radiate a new vitality. He liked the plain outing clothes she wore.

How he had hated those slinky satin robes, the musky perfume and the Venetian bradelets that until this salutary experience had become so much a part of her. Thank God, she was back to normal once more!

"Want to walk up to the trout stream for a last look?" he asked with his arm around blue-eyed Lia. "I've had some odd jobs to do. And we can take the time."

They had both loved the spot by the jade green waters where they had passed lazy, happy hours in the sunlight, so that now her reaction to his suggestion took him by surprise. "Don't be sentimental, Val," she drawled. "I don't want to walk that distance when we have such a long ride ahead. Come, and close my bag, will you?"

She turned away and he stood motionless for a space. For days she had been gay, understanding, tractable. But now he sensed a subtle change in her, a fresh withdrawal. Later, when Townner called, "All aboard, folks," Val went slowly down the steps and lifted his wife into the saddle. As the horses moved forward to strike into the green shadow of the timber, he turned back for one last glimpse of the cabin and their enchanted lake. But Lia, he saw, had gone straight on without once looking behind her.

On Monday morning, when Val reported for duty, he found that much radio traffic had been coming through communications; and with the enthusiasm born of a healthy body and a renewed interest in his job, he delved into the stack of paper work he found waiting on his desk.

At noon he decided not to take time off for luncheon but asked Dyer to tell Opal to send him a sandwich and to inform Mrs. Preston he would not be home until six-thirty at the earliest. But just after midday Brad Norris came through the doorway and at sight of the man's gray face Val knew that something serious was in the air.

"What's wrong?" he demanded as he led his friend into an inner office where they could be alone. Brad, he thought, had aged five years since their last meeting.

The other man dropped into a chair and lighted a cigarette with fingers that trembled. "I've had a tough jolt, fellah," he said huskily. "It's Sue. It's—it's awful; she has always been high-strung nervous—you know. But a week ago last Tuesday she went all to pieces." He lifted gray eyes, sick with misery, to meet Val's. "Sue isn't herself, see? I came back from California to find her in a bed state. I don't know why. That's the devil of it! I can't get her to talk, to tell me what is wrong. I thought she acted queerly when I returned home that night. Sort of rambled when she spoke. Then, a while later, she got hysterical. And finally when I couldn't quiet her and telephoned a doctor—she—well, I had a hard time handling her—"

"Brad, this is terrible! Terrible! Val had risen to pace the room. "From that night we had two nurses to watch her," the young aviator went on, "and later I had to give in and take her to a private sanitarium in Seattle for observation. Her father is coming today from the east. And this afternoon the doctors will give us the verdict." He put his head into his hands. After a time he spoke again in the same low, monotonous tone. "They say she isn't very strong and has had a shock of some sort. She's very emotional, you know. But the part that hits hardest is that she has turned against me—can't bear the sight of me—"

Val put a tight hand on his friend's shoulder. "Is there anything under the sun I can do to help?" he demanded. "Just name it. Come and stay with us until Sue is better. You can camp in the study, fellah. You shouldn't be alone. Let Lia and me help some way—"

The other man shook his head. "Good of you to offer but I couldn't. Is—Lia all right?"

"She's well, thanks. We've been off on my leave, you know."

Brad nodded. He started to say something, then stopped. A moment later, he stood up abruptly. "Sorry to have dumped my troubles on you, Val," he muttered, "but you're the only one I can talk to. No one else knows about this. I've told everyone that Sue is away visiting."

"You can depend on me not to mention it, Brad. We've always been sort of like—brothers—haven't we? Lord, fellah, I'd give the world to be able to help you."

"Too late to do anything now. And the rotten part of it is, I have only myself to blame," the man said bitterly. "The navy was my job. I loved it and I should have stuck to it. I thought I was doing the right thing when I tossed away my career. But I should have looked out for Sue. There are other ways of taking care of your wife than just by giving her what money can buy." He paused to stare out the window. "And even there I have failed. I've lost everything I made on the market. I can't even keep up my payments on the house. That has hurt Sue. She is awfully proud, you know. Of course, I have my job left. My eyes were like those of a man on the rack. 'I've got to hang onto that job,' he said slowly. 'No matter what happens, I don't dare lose it! Sue must have every comfort I can give her, now. I must hang on to this job—'

"Buck up, kid! Sue is going to come through. A nervous breakdown isn't always serious."

"If she pulls out of this I won't ask anything else. I—guess you know how I feel about my wife. She is all that counts with me." He turned away with an abrupt gesture of farewell and strode from the room. Back at his desk Val tried to lose himself in his task; but now thoughts of Brad's tragedy kept thrusting in to distract him. At five o'clock, he could stand it no longer. The work that remained could easily go over until tomorrow. He gave Dyer some final instructions, caught up his cap and went out.

Once in the open, he stood uncertainly for a moment then crossed to his quarters to enter through an empty kitchen. Opal, he thought, must be busy in the front of the house, and he was relieved that she was not there to inform his wife of his presence. Lia would be quick to guess that something was wrong and he didn't want her to know about Sue. She had never liked Brad's wife. And anyway, he wished to be alone to think.

As he went through the hallway toward the small study, he noticed that the passage was blue with cigarette smoke, but since he heard no voices from the living room, concluded that Stephen Garene probably had been there and had gone again after one of his brief visits with his daughter.

Deep in his own thoughts he closed the study door noiselessly behind him, tossed his cap into a chair, and commenced a restless pacing of the small room. It didn't seem possible that Sue and Brad—so young and happy such a short while ago—had come to disaster! His eyes darkened angrily. Cordray was mixed up in this somehow! And the devil of it was that even if Brad guessed the truth, he was helpless to do anything about it. As he said, Sue must have every care. And in these precarious times, that was a life and death matter that he hang onto his job.

Poems That Live

A MILE WITH ME

Oh, who will walk a mile with me,
 Along life's merry way?
 A comrade blithe and full of glee,
 Who dares to laugh out loud and free,
 And let his frolic fancy play,
 Like a happy child, through the flowers gay
 That fill the field and fringe the way,
 Where he walks a mile with me.

And who will walk a mile with me,
 Along life's weary way?
 A friend whose heart has eyes to see
 The stars shine out o'er the darkening lea,
 And the quiet rest at the end of the day—
 A friend who knows and dares to say,
 The brave, sweet words that cheer the way
 Where he walks a mile with me.

With such a comrade, such a friend,
 I fain would walk till journeys end,
 Through summer sunshine, winter rain,
 And then? Farewell, we shall meet again

The opening lead was the Q of diamonds, removing dummy's only card of re-entry, aside from its long club suit.

Declarer hoped the clubs were established, although a six-card suit never must be considered safely established unless headed by the four top honors. The Ace of clubs was led. Q. Declarer needs only his six clubs, two diamonds and a single trick in both spades and hearts to make 4-odd. Lose to South's Ace, and that player will take out East's high diamond. Lead a low club. To avoid being picked up South must put up his 10 of clubs. Win with the Q. Lead back a heart and win with the K. Lead back declarer's last club, picking up both of South's cards of that suit and thus run off four tricks. Discard both lower spades and L's last diamond from declarer's hand. Victim of Eye Troubles Inclined to Exaggerate

LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

I SAT TODAY in the clinic of what I suppose every oculist would acknowledge to be the greatest hospital for eye diseases on earth—Moorfield's in London.

Two things impressed me the most. First, that so many eye troubles can be helped by such simple means; second, that eye troubles so often are nothing more nor less than a local expression in the eyes of a general bodily disease.

Let us try to exemplify these ideas in the order named.

That most eye troubles are serious. And, in a way, I mean they are exaggerated.

It is natural to exaggerate them. Heaven knows, when your eyesight seems to fail you naturally worry. But here is an example:

A middle-aged man came in, led by his granddaughter. Both eyes were bandaged. He was fairly blubbering with fright and fear. He had wakened up that morning to find the sight in his right eye gone. He was blind in one eye, he kept repeating. He had promptly had both eyes bandaged and come to Moorfield's. He was sure the whole thing was due to some very potent gin he had consumed the night before.

The attending oculist, who sees thousands of the patients a year, showed us a most unusual illustration. The patient was a woman of thirty-five, plainly clothed, but neat and evidently educated. She had come to the hospital several weeks before, because of constant dimness of vision. Careful examination revealed very little. She wore glasses which were found to be correct. (How seldom will most eye-examiners admit that your glasses are correct.) The eye exams and optic nerve showed no disease. The only thing noticed was that the pupils were large and did not contract to light. The natural suggestion was that she had been using atropine, but she denied the use of any drugs, until after careful questioning she said she had been using suppositories, which it was found contained atropine.

After discontinuing them, her eye troubles cleared up.

The customer shook her head. "That certainly wouldn't do," she said.

The assistant groaned inwardly. "And why not, madam?"

"It takes me all my time to attend to my pet canary. I can't be bothered with having to look after two birds."

M'GRADY PLAN TO SETTLE STRIKES

McGRADY PLAN

Each community to set up a committee for industrial peace. The committee to be composed equally of employers and leaders of labor.

Other members to include members of the city government, the press and the professions.

A mass meeting of citizens then is to ratify this committee. The committee then will select a small executive group.

The executive group will select from its standing panel a working committee to attend to specific grievances.

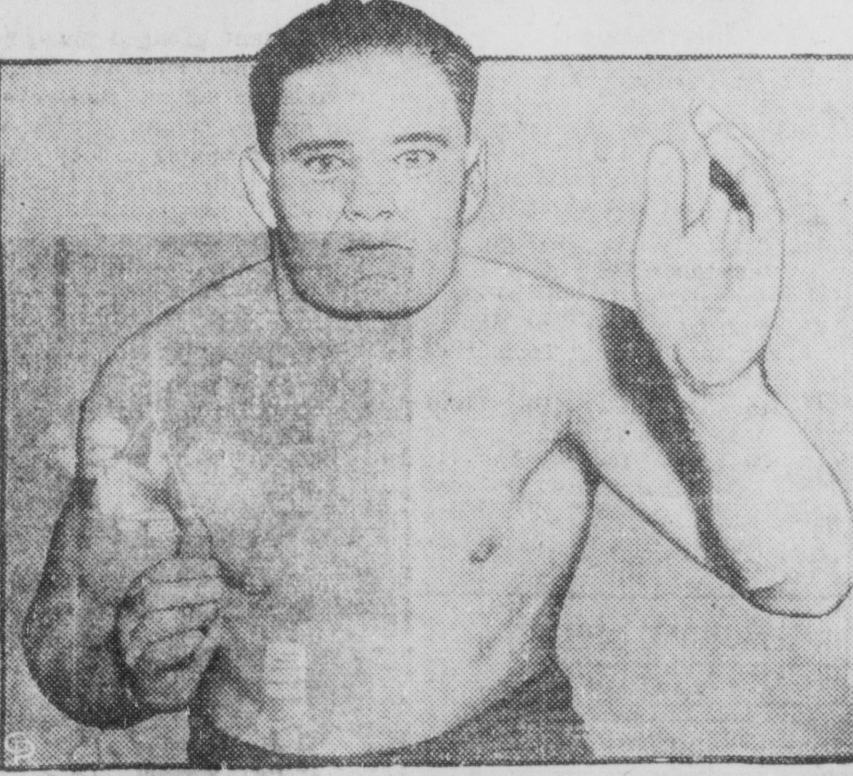

The entire setup is voluntary, but it would be of home folk, who know the community.

The setup would not interfere with the negotiation of agreements.

Edward F. McGrady

The most persistent settler of strikes and other labor problems in the United States is Edward F. McGrady, U. S. assistant secretary of labor. A former organizer of the American Federation of Labor, McGrady is adept as a conciliator. Upon settling several serious employer-employee differences in Toledo, O., he proposed a voluntary plan (indicated above), which has become known as the Toledo plan, but which can be used in any community. General Hugh Johnson, appointed federal works director of New York City, has requested the aid of McGrady on all labor relations in connection with the proposed $20,000,000 a month expenditures there.

Mayor Harry L. Davis

Mayor Harry L. Davis, Republican, of Cleveland, has been called upon to resign by a newspaper and civic organizations because of alleged scandals and corruption in the city administration, climaxed by a boat party given by the city's alleged "gambling boss." Cleveland's safety director and other city officials were in the party, during which a girl employed at city hall was drowned. Cleveland formerly had city manager form of government, and now may seek its return.

CHINA TRIES TO WARD OFF JAPAN

General Jiro Minami Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek General Senjuro Hayashi

The North China situation is acute following declaration of China's highest executive body, the national government's central political council, that it could not accept Japan's demands because they would reduce China to the status of a "Japanese protectorate". Map indicates territory which Japan already has in its possession—Manchuria, Jehol and Hopei—and also shows Chahar Province which Japan desires to connect with its present holdings in China. Leading figures in the latest Chinese-Japanese situation are General Senjuro Hayashi, Japanese war minister, General Jiro Minami, Japanese ambassador and commandant in Manchukuo, and Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, China's dominant military leader.

OIL '9' ADDS TO LOOP LEAD; WIN 10 TO 3

Tally Six in Fifth With Kline's Home Run Big Blow; Merriman at Short

Cities Service Oils took a tight-grasp on first place in the softball loop Monday evening by turning back the hard-fighting Jones Specials, 10 to 3.

The Specials led until the fifth inning when the Oils climbed all over Bob Jones for six runs. Timmy Kline's home run was the big blow of the frame.

The Specials were held to nine hits by Leonard Buskirk who also fanned five while walking seven. Bob Jones was touched for 13 bingles, fanned no one and walked once.

The Oils will play the Circleville Oils Wednesday evening in an effort to further increase their lead over the Eshelman Feeds who meet the Purina Chows tonight. An Eshelman victory would keep the standing as it now is with the Cities Service Oils out in front by one game.

A new lineup played errorless ball for the Oils. With Merle Davis and Rich Smalley, regular short-stop and center fielder in training camp, Manager Judy Gordon obtained the services of Eve Merriman, former Circleville Oil moved Eshelman to center field and used Henn and E. Radcliff in right, Eldridge's former pasture.

MILLERS AGAIN DEFEAT INDIANS

COLUMBUS, July 9.—American Association teams prepared to don their war paint today in a big way after a lean day yesterday which saw two games played.

The league-leading Minneapolis Millers sent Indianapolis into third place by shutting the Indians out, 4 to 0.

Walter Tauscher, Miller pitcher, allowed the Indians seven hits, one more than Turner, Indian hurler gave the victors. Errors, however, allowed the Millers to score three times in the first.

Monty Stratton, elongated St. Paul pitcher, proved too much for Louisville and aided the Saints to a 10 to 4 victory.

Stratton allowed the Colonels eight hits while his mates were pounding out 14 safe base blows.

WILDCAT COACH FEARS BUCKEYES

CHICAGO, July 9.—In the opinion of Lynn Waldorf, new coach at Northwestern university, Ohio State will have the most powerful team in the big ten next year.

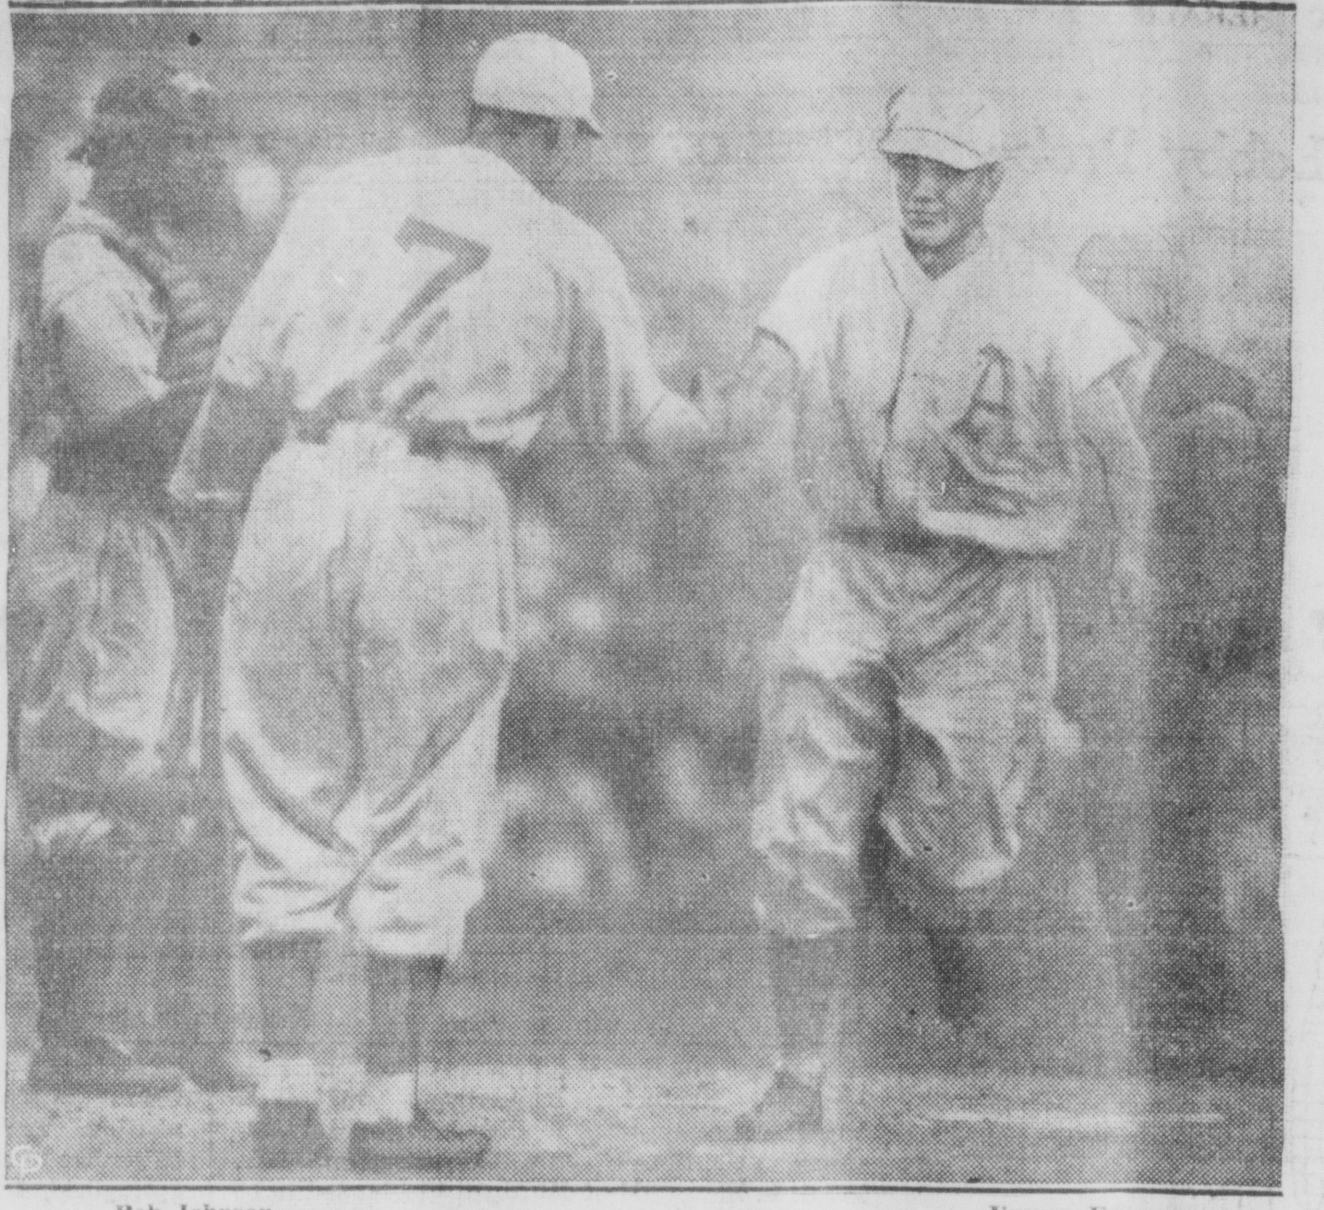

At a business association luncheon he predicted: "Watch for Ohio first, then Minnesota and Illinois. These will be the outstanding teams."

Of his own crew, Waldorf was not so optimistic saying they were a "heavy-slow machine, which will be good on defensive, but still have to work out an offensive."

Home Run by Foxx Which Wins All-Star Game

Bob Johnson Jimmy Foxx

Jimmy Foxx, Philadelphia Athletic's star first baseman, grasps the hand of his teammate, Bob Johnson, A's outfielder, as Jimmy crosses the plate completing the home run which won the All-Star interleague baseball game in Cleveland for the American league team. Foxx's smash into the left field stands scored Lou Gehrig of the New York Yankees, ahead of him. Final score: Americans, 4; Nationals, 1—giving the junior league its third straight All-Star victory. A crowd of 69,812 paid more than $93,000 to see the game in Cleveland's municipal stadium.

Frick is for Better Rules

CLEVELAND, July 9.—Following the National league's third straight defeat in the annual star game by a score of 4-1, Ford C. Frick, president of the league, today intimated that if the teams didn't give better cooperation the spectacle would be dropped.

Frick, his associates and National league followers were indignant at the manner in which the managers used their all-star hurling either Saturday's or Sunday's games, thus making them unfit for duty in the big game.

It was so bad that Manager Frankie Frisch finally had no other recourse but to start Bill Walker, a southpaw from his own club. It is said that Manager Bill Terry of the Giants wanted Hal Schumacher to pitch only three innings. He pitched four.

Frick said: "If this all-star game continues next year there's going to be some new rules and I'll see to it that we have the best available players ready for action."

Schumacher was the only one of the five all-star hurlers who didn't pitch during the two days preceding the all-star.

The American leaguers were particularly jubilant over their third straight triumph. Especially Mickey Cochrane, who managed the outfit. Concerning his last minute shift in the lineup, Mickey said:

We were surprised when the movie men asked to take pictures of the starting pitchers and Bill Walker popped out of the dugout. So I changed the lineup, putting in Simmons and Hensley, right handed hitters, to take Cramer's and my place.

Jimmy Foxx, the burly Athletic's all-around star, was as happy as a kid over his home run, accounting for two runs in the first inning that sounded the National leaguers death warrant.

The National leaguers, in their hour of sorrow, pounced upon their pitching difficulties as the main reason for their defeat. But the National leaguers lost because their fine hitters could get only four hits off Gomez and Harder.

G. O. P. STALWARTS PARTICIPATE IN CLEVELAND RALLY

JOHN BRICKER GIVEN CHEERS

Tells Crowd Ohio is Still Republican, Takes Shot at Democrats.

CLEVELAND, July 9.—Gaining steadily in numbers as their rally gained in prestige, Republicans from six states got down to business today and took up the major task of their two-day meeting, consideration of resolutions that are expected to represent a platform for the party.

The rally, known formally as the Republican Crusaders conference, moved forward in noisy fashion toward its close tonight but with apparent harmony restored to the Pennsylvania delegation, which had been the most discordant note in the proceedings. The leaders of each of the G. O. P. factions in the Keystone state's large delegation declared that all discussion had been removed.

Strict adherence to the pre-arranged convention plan to "stick to issues, and not take up candidates," was assured today as the result of an outburst of fireworks at last night's typical "political convention" meeting.

Heated discussion was assured today upon submission of a report by the important resolutions committee by its chairman, Thomas J. Barrett of Terra Alta, W. Va. one of the major questions confronting the delegates was that of a farm plank—and in this discussion F. H. Thomson, Michigan commissioner of agriculture, was expected to play a leading part.

All the doubt that remained even as late as at yesterday's opening session as to whether the regular Republican leadership of Ohio was in sympathy with the meeting called and arranged by former State Senator George H. Ebert of Cleveland was dispelled last night.

Most of the state's "big-wigs" in G. O. P. circles were present. These included Attorney General John W. Bricker, State Treasurer Harry S. Day, former Attorney General Gilbert Dettman, Frank Geiger, member of the Ohio Utilities Commission, Thomas J. Herbert, former assistant attorney general, and Daniel E. Morgan, ex-city manager of Cleveland.

From out of the state, some of those present for the first time last night were Jacob Allen, secretary of the recent "Grass Roots" Republican conference at Springfield, Ill., Robert Garland, president of the Pittsburgh city council, and Rep. George C. Watson of Michigan.

The most riotous and enthusiastic reception of the convention to date was accorded Bricker, G. O. P. stalwart in Ohio, when he delivered an eloquent 10-minute address at the night session. Bricker told the delegates that Ohio still is a Republican state. Pointing out that Ohio's treasurer, auditor, and attorney general are Republicans, he declared:

"The people of Ohio won't trust their money to the Democrats. They won't trust their bookkeeping to the Democrats. The people of Ohio have a Republican attorney general because the Democrats have no respect for law and the constitution of the United States."

Through an efficient press relations bureau, Hopkins tries to tell the world that his relief clients don't rake leaves any more, haven't for years, and won't in the future. Yet the digest of press comment brought to him every morning are heavily seasoned with "CWA Revived," "Work Relief Billions to be Spent on Leaf-Raking," and the like.

As a matter of fact, leaf-raking did expire after the first autumn of the New Deal. And Harry Hopkins has substituted in its place a type of FERA work which for a year or more has been in effect, Works-Relief.

FERA projects have been substantial and permanent. The list ranges from armories, auditoriums, and abattoirs to ranger posts, sewers, hospitals, court houses and jails.

And Hustling Harry wants the world to know that the swimming pool he built in Walla Walla, the stadium he constructed in Baltimore, the naval armory at Toledo and the garbage incinerator at Charleston, S. C., will outlast the leaves that come in the fall.

Our statesmen want to go home before they're finished. France's have to go home before they are started.

Ebert Picked by Capital As Series Ticket Agent

E. C. Ebert has recently been appointed as Circleville representative for the series of concerts to be given at Capital University, Columbus, this fall and winter.

During the past few years a good many Circleville people have been attending concerts at Capital University, but because of local demand for a special representative familiar with conditions in Circleville to handle the ticket sales, Harm Harns, who is the University concert manager, has appointed Mr. Ebert to take complete charge of this territory.

The series of concerts to be given this year has been pronounced the most outstanding between here and New York.

The season opens on October 18 with that grand old man of the stage, Otis Skinner. Mr. Skinner will present excerpts from four or five of his most famous plays.

On November 5 the University will present Dances Frantz, a young American pianist who has won national recognition for his brilliant concerts in which he has demonstrated amazing technique. Following Frantz, on December 3, comes Richard Halliburton, a name familiar to everyone. The Columbus lecture will be his first Ohio appearance after his present world tour. It should be full of new adventures both interesting and exciting.

December 9, 10, and 11 Capital University will present "The Student Prince." The original New York leads are being imported for this production and the now nationally famous University chorus will sing.

On January 28 comes the headliner of the series, Nelson Eddy. After his recent picture, "Naughty Marietta," this famous baritone will need no introduction. Mr. Eddy is now working on a picture which promises to be even more popular, the title is "Maytime."

Close upon the heels of Nelson Eddy comes that famous composer Igor Stravinsky in joint concert with Samuel Dushkin the violinist.

And sometime during April, the date to be announced, the series will wind up with that chorus which is often referred to as the "Father of Chorus," namely the St. Olaf Choir, under the direction of Dr. Christiansen.

The girl was described as about 5 feet, 6 inches tall, and weighing about 130 pounds. When she disappeared she was wearing a brown dress and hat.

G. O. P. STALWARTS PARTICIPATE IN CLEVELAND RALLY

JOHN BRICKER GIVEN CHEERS

Tells Crowd Ohio is Still Republican, Takes Shot at Democrats.

CLEVELAND, July 9.—Gaining steadily in numbers as their rally gained in prestige, Republicans from six states got down to business today and took up the major task of their two-day meeting—consideration of resolutions that are expected to represent a platform for the party.

The rally, known formally as the Republican Crusaders conference, moved forward in noisy fashion toward its close tonight but with apparent harmony restored to the Pennsylvania delegation, which had been the most discordant note in the proceedings. The leaders of each of the G. O. P. factions in the Keystone state's large delegation declared that all discussion had been removed.

Strict adherence to the pre-arranged convention plan to "stick to issues, and not take up candidates," was assured today as the result of an outburst of fireworks at last night's typical "political convention" meeting.

Heated discussion was assured today upon submission of a report by the important resolutions committee by its chairman, Thomas J. Barrett of Terra Alta, W. Va. One of the major questions confronting the delegates was that of a farm plank—and in this discussion F. H. Thomson, Michigan commissioner of agriculture, was expected to play a leading part.

All the doubt that remained even as late as yesterday's opening session as to whether the regular Republican leadership of Ohio was in sympathy with the meeting called and arranged by former State Senator George H. Bender of Cleveland was dispelled last night.

Most of the state's "big-wigs" in G. O. P. circles were present. These included Attorney General John W. Bricker, State Treasurer Harry S. Day, Former Attorney General Gilbert Betman, Frank Geiger, member of the Ohio Utilities Commission, Thomas J. Herbert, former assistant attorney general, and Daniel E. Morgan, ex-city manager of Cleveland.

From out of the state, some of those present for the first time last night were Jacob Allen, secretary of the recent "Grass Roots" Republican conference at Springfield, Ill., Robert Garland, president of the Pittsburgh city council, and Rep. George C. Watson of Michigan.

The most riotous and enthusiastic reception of the convention to date was accorded Bricker, G. O. P. stalwart in Ohio, when he delivered an eloquent 10-minute address at the night session. Bricker told the delegates that Ohio still is a Republican state. Pointing out that Ohio's treasurer, auditor, and attorney general are Republicans, he declared:

"The people of Ohio won't trust their money to the Democrats. They won't trust their bookkeeping to the Democrats. The people of Ohio have a Republican attorney general because the Democrats have no respect for law and the constitution of the United States."
